

PRESS RELEASE

Five more Kenyans join Voices of Africa Media Foundation mobile reporting project

Voices of Africa Media Foundation has launched its fourth phase of mobile reporting training in Kenya, where five more trainees joined the project after a four-day training. Conducted by the Foundation's coordinator for East-Africa, Khamis Ramadhan, the training covered the basics of mobile reporting, including the technicalities of the mobile phone.

"I have learned to shoot with a phone, to edit, to merge clips, and how to upload to the internet", said Nick Okoth shortly after the training. Okoth, who is among the five young trainees, will be reporting from Migori, place of residence. Together with him were Bonny Kipchirchir, who will be reporting from the Nairobi's slum of Kibera, Sylvia Kore, from Kajiado, Thomas Onyiego, from Makeni, Nairobi, and Njeri Meresa from Ugunja

Since 2007, Voices of Africa Media Foundation has about twenty five young men and women in different parts of Kenya. The aim has always been to open the doors of the new media world to the less privileged but talented young Africans. A similar project is underway in Ghana, and a new phase is about to start in Tanzania. The project was also completed in Cameroon.

Haarlem, 18 March 2010

Pim de Wit
Director
Voices of Africa
Media Foundation

Contact us

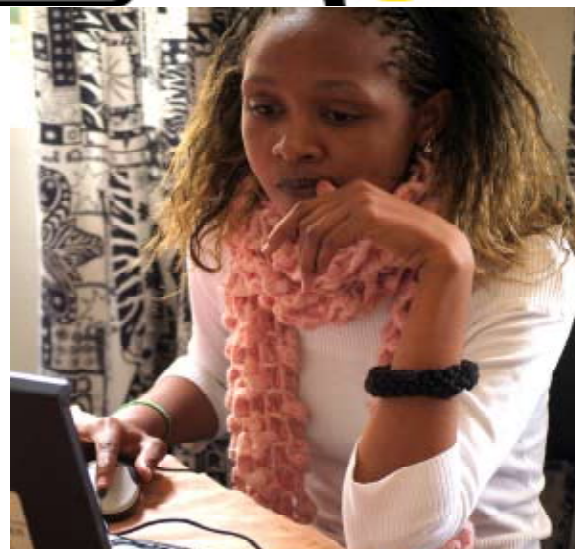

T +31 (0)23-5428366

E info@voamf.org

Office address: Moving soon!

Jansweg 42-E, 2011 KN Haarlem, the Netherlands
From 1st of April 2010:
Julianastraat 30, 2012 ES Haarlem, the Netherlands

www.voicesofafricamediafoundation.org www.voicesofafrica.com

Sylvia Kore and Thomas Onyiego
during a mobile reporting training in Nairobi Kenya Their reports are accessible on:

www.voicesofafrica.com

